

No. American Bar Association standards for law schools prohibit payment. However, one student is hired during the summer to work part-time, and is paid. For this position, preference is given to students who have taken The Elder Law Clinic course.